

TIRED OUT!

At this season, nearly every one needs to use some of our Tonic. It is a tonic for the system, and for those who need building up.

BROWN'S IRON BITTERS
THE BEST TONIC
For Weakness, Lassitude, Lack of Energy, etc. It is a tonic for the system, and for those who need building up.

Scrofula of Lungs Relieved.

I am now 49 years old, and have suffered for the last fifteen years with a lung trouble. Several members of the family on my mother's side of the house had died with consumption, and the doctors were all agreed in their opinion that I had consumption also. I had all the distressing symptoms of that terrible disease. I have spent thousands of dollars to arrest the march of this disease; I have employed all of the usual methods, not only in my own case, but in the treatment of other members of my family, but temporary relief was all that I obtained. I was told by a friend that I should try S.S.S. I found it an invigorating tonic, and have since taken fifty bottles. The results are most remarkable. My cough has left me, my strength has returned, and I weigh sixty pounds more than I ever did in my life. It has been years since I stopped the use of the medicine, but I have had no return of the disease, and there are no signs or symptoms left in my system. I do the hardest kind of mechanical work, and feel as well as I ever felt since I was a boy. I know, I know, I would feel statements to make, but I am honest when I say that I owe my existence and health to-day to S.S.S. It is the only medicine that has done this much for me, and I would be recreant to the duty I owe to suffering humanity if I failed to bear this cheerful testimony to the merits of this wonderful medicine. I am well known in the city of Montgomery, and can refer to some of the best citizens in the city. T. J. HOLZ.

OPIMUM

EMPEROR WILLIAM'S DOMESTIC LIFE.

The Valet de Chambre-Cabinet Brice-bras—Personal Habits.

His majesty detests new clothes, as he feels himself so much more at home in his old ones; a worn-out uniform serves him as a robe de chambre; a pair of loose old slippers add to his comfort during the morning hours, and when he is ready to go to his working cabinet he finds awaiting him his faithful Engel, the doyen of servants, who pours out a bowl of steaming tea. This valet de chambre is a septuagenarian and by no means so robust as his master, who treats him with the easiest familiarity, chats with him on a footing of perfect equality, and asks every morning after his health in a most effusive and off-handed way.

The emperor's cabinet is so taken up with furniture, art objects, bric-a-brac, broderies executed by members of the imperial family, of presents sent from all parts of the country, especially on festive days, that one can scarcely pick his steps through it. A big mass of papers and documents are always lying on the emperor's desk. His majesty reads all of them before affixing his signature and often annotates, when there is space, with one of those large, dull lead-pencils used by carpenters in marking boards. He writes with difficulty, as one of his fingers is a little stiff, the result of a wound received many years ago while hunting. After this first hour of comparative rest, his majesty's real day's work begins. He completes his toilet; and like a true soldier—which he has always been and will be to the end—confers with the chief of his military cabinet and then with his ministers, who enter his study one at a time. For other audiences he passes into a simply-furnished salon, the few ornaments and broderies of which have been made by the members of the imperial family. The emperor has a pronounced liking for the bluebottle, the simple flower of the corn fields. In the choice of ornaments this weakness of his majesty is never forgotten. The bluebottle forms the basis of all the embroidered bouquets.

Emperor William does not smoke or take snuff. Neither does he wear spectacles. When reading or writing he uses an eye-glass, although he does not wish to admit that his sight is growing weak. His majesty sleeps as soundly as the healthiest of youths, and never takes a rest during the course of the day. He has been caught nodding, however, on a few occasions within the past year or two when the receptions were too protracted. He always receives standing up in his salon, after having changed his old uniform for a more correct one. Should he receive a prince who has conferred on him the purely honorary command of a regiment that bears his name, his majesty always wears the uniform of that particular regiment. In this respect there is never the slightest derogation from the rigid rule of etiquette. Hence his majesty has frequently to change his uniform three or four times within an hour or two.

The reports from the military and civil authorities generally last from 10 a. m. to 1 p. m. After this the emperor takes his breakfast, always alone, so that he may not be obliged to talk. The repast is of the simplest kind—eggs and a chop—and it lasts only twelve or fifteen minutes. The imperial physicians have thus far been unable to induce this vigorous old man to take a little repose after his long morning's work, and they have been equally unsuccessful in their attempts to make his majesty forego certain dishes of uneasy digestion, such as lobster, of which he is passionately fond. His majesty has three physicians, Dr. Lauer, chief physician of the staff, that is, the highest medical position in the army, and Drs. Lenthold and Thiemann, both distinguished in their profession.

Shortly after dinner his majesty takes a promenade in the park, and about 5 o'clock his majesty returns to the palace, where he receives the commands of the empress for the evening. The personal relations existing between this august couple, though for a time a little troubled on political questions, are charming in their simplicity, save on great ceremonial occasions. The imperial pair always "thou" and "thee" one another, like the average run of husbands and wives.—Cor. New York World.

Electric Signaling from Balloons.

Some months ago it was stated that a plan of electric signaling from balloons was invented by Mr. Eric S. Bruce, having special advantages for army purposes. It will, then, be enough now to say that balloons after having been permitted to ascend a suitable distance are caused to be lighted by means of electric lamps, supplied with current from wires communicating with an electrical generator on the ground, for long and short intervals, so as to spell out words in a Morse alphabet manner.

The essential nature of Mr. Bruce's invention being thus mentioned details may easily be recalled to mind. This method of signaling was tried a short time ago by the British military authorities at Chatham, and it appears that it has given entire satisfaction. The light thrown down by an illuminated balloon was so brilliant and diffused over so wide an arena when the balloon was at a considerable height that some one suggested that such a light might well be made use of for conducting certain military operations at night.—New York Times.

American Petroleum in Pagan Temples.

Petroleum finds a wider market and the Yankees' brand still holds its superiority. The bulk of our shipments abroad are in tin cans with wooden covers, and are to be found in the uttermost parts of the earth. An order comes to Philadelphia direct from China, which, when landed on that "Celestial shore," will be carried on the backs of mules 1,000 into the interior of China, where it is to be used in lighting pagan temples, the lamps of which are never allowed to go out. Many of these places of worship have 300 lamps burning, and are never allowed to be without at least one pagan worshipper. A lot of fifteen large German vessels are now bound to the Delaware for Asiatic oil cargo.—Boston Budget.

Law-Books and General Reading.

I am going to quit the practice of law, for a time at least, and devote all my leisure to general reading. A man engaged in the practice of law can—or should—read nothing but law books, and can only read a small proportion of the number of important law books that are issued. When he quits reading law books he should quit practicing law, for law is a very jealous mistress, and will not accept divided or partial attention. I find that while I have been practicing law I have neglected general reading, and am away behind on the literature of the past twenty years.—Ex-Senator Harrison.

Lounges for the Representatives.

The lounges of the house are to many congressmen the most important part of its furniture. They get together in twos and threes upon them, and I have seen members during a proxy session opening their mouths wide and snoring as they lay there. There are twelve of these lounges, six on each side of the house chamber, back in the corner and near the fire. They are of black walnut and oak, with spring beds, upholstered in green leather, which is well worn with the bodies of the many statesmen who lie and sit upon them daily.—Carp. in Cleveland Leader.

BEST REMEDY KNOWN FOR CATARRH, SORE-THROAT, ETC., in all Forms and Stages.

PURELY VEGETABLE. ENTIRELY HARMLESS. REQUIRES NO INSTRUMENT. IT CURES WHERE OTHERS FAIL TO GIVE RELIEF.

ATHENS, GA., Dec. 12, 1885. Gentlemen: I have had catarrh in a very severe form three years. During this time my stomach was greatly deranged; my sight, taste and hearing were much impaired; the latter three almost destroyed. About two months ago Judge Cobb gave me a bottle of Certain Catarrh Cure. This I have used carefully and irregularly but with most gratifying results. The above troubles have entirely disappeared, my general condition is much improved, and so great has been the change, I feel like a different person entirely. Yours, etc., LUCY RICKER.

What Lucy Rucker (col. says above, I believe) is true. The effect of the medicine upon her was prompt and remarkably efficacious. All the suffering seems relieved, and she tells me she has had it. (Signed.) HOWELL COMB, Judge City Court, Athens, Ga.

I have examined the recommendations and certain Catarrh Cure and being personally acquainted with the parties by whom they were given, feel no hesitancy in saying they are entitled to the utmost confidence of the public. The S. C. C. is entirely reliable and honorable in all dealings. (Signed.) R. K. REAVES, Mayor of Athens.
